Description of Property and Eligibility Determination:

This dwelling is a simple, basic, merchant-builder generated one and one-half story dwelling based on the Cape Cod style and located at 1220 Greystone Road in Arbutus, Maryland. Built in 1949, it is located within a area of widely differing styles of typical mid-twentieth subdivision housing, immediately adjacent to the Baltimore Beltway. The dwelling is a frame gable-end structure building with gable roof dormers on the south-facing entrance façade. The center entrance has been obscured by a large, cross-gable roofed, porch which projects considerably from the wall plane of the entrance façade. This dwelling is a variant of the Cape Cod style, popularized by developers in the mid-twentieth century suburbs in the Mid Atlantic states. This dwelling is an undistinguished example of this architectural style, which exhibited many variations.

It lacks significant architectural distinction and therefore would not meet the National Register criterion C. In addition, it has no known significant association with important persons or events, nor would it likely have significance for the information contained in possibly associated archeological materials, given its late date of construction, thus it is not likely significant under Criteria A, B, or D for listing in the National Register of Historic Places.
